

Jeff Currier global fly fishing

Family

Lusaka

November 15, 2005 6:02 am

The house boat that the Currier's traveled to the upper reaches of the Zambezi River

We are amidst a long hard day in Lusaka, Zambia. We are trying to do some errands such as burn CDS of photos, figure out what to do with the rest of our trip, buy a bus ticket, get money etc. It's hard to do as it is about 100 degrees and Lusaka aint exactly a sweet town. And nothing is working out. We have wasted most of the day as we messed around with help from a travel agent and I will never do it again and continue to wing things as always.

Likely what's making the day suck is we have been so spoiled for the last 10 days. Our lodge deal worked out so good its unreal. I did the TV show with my friend and had 4 luxurious days at the Ichingo Lodge. The owner liked me and Granny so much that he invited us for a trip up the Zambezi River on his house boat afterwards. We went for 3 days up river, fishing and relaxing amongst tribes along the river.

Jeff poses with a Thin Face Largemouth an unusual catch on the fly

We were somewhere between Livingstone and Mongu. Our base was out of Namibia. Another notch in the passport. Caught only a few fish but all were rare on the fly and big. I got quite a show brewing!

Our next move is to get on the bus tomorrow morning and travel east to Chipata, Zambia and then to South Luanga National Park for a few days. Supposedly travel is very difficult by bus so hopefully we get there before giving up.

Love JEFF

I am planning a big email to everyone soon.